Total Quality has been implemented for years in manufacturing industries; its implementation in project-oriented organizations is only starting. A Total Quality program is a powerful way to change the organization's culture into a more fluid, participative and effectiveness oriented culture. It is a great tool to enhance the organization's capabilities and the consistency of complex project delivery. We have used the Total Quality approach extremely successfully in project-oriented organizations that had to change their culture after a turn-around following chronic poor project performance. Project Value Delivery boasts an unequalled track-record implementing this tool in leading project-oriented organizations.
